DIETS THAT WORK

Jenna's Slimdown Solution

Shake Off Fat — Stat!

ollywood's food tribes can't seem to high water content for hydration and are agree on the best diet: Paleo? Glutenfree? Something else? But there's one fat-torching secret A-listers unite on: the potent little green smoothie! Heidi Klum and Sandra Bullock credit their morning greens with keeping them slim. Beyoncé got in killer shape drinking her trainer's cocktail of spinach, banana, almond butter and rice milk. And new mom Jenna Dewan-Tatum tells Life & Style, "One of my best diet tricks is having a green smoothie in the morning instead of a big breakfast." The Witches of East End actress, 33, who quickly bounced back after daughter Everly's birth last year, whips up a daily blend of romaine, celery, spinach and fruit. "You get tons of vitamins, minerals and fiber at the beginning of the day instead of loading up with carbs," she raves. "It gives me more energy!"

filled with green leafy veggies, which you can eat in abundance and still not gain weight," explains J.J. Smith, author of 10-Day Green Smoothie Cleanse. "The high fiber content is filling and reduces cravings." Fiber also slows the passage of food through the stomach and keeps sugars from entering the bloodstream too quickly, regulating insulin and slowing the digestion of carbs, adds Smith, who favors blending over juicing. On her 10-day cleanse (see below), Smith suggests 12- to 16-ounce smoothies with a 6-4 ratio of fruit to veggies and made with darker leafy greens such as kale, spinach and chard, which are the most nutrient-rich. To amp up the potency, add pea protein, which "can help you lose water weight faster," says Smith. Navitas Naturals Superfood blend (hemp, cacao and maca) is another great option.
